

Ocean Veritas
Lauren Tom and Krystle Chavarria

1. Prepared samples from last cruise for shipping tomorrow.
2. Called C-Port Receiving to track down (2) lost packages: one VWR (lab bottles) and one from Millipore (sterile forceps), they said everything they had was already loaded onto the Ocean Veritas yesterday.
3. Checked all boxes that were loaded on board yesterday, did not find any from VWR or Millipore.
4. Contacted Simon Lisiecki, he will be responsible for shipping our samples on June 11th after we return from this next sampling trip. He will also be responsible for moving all of our supplies over to the Brooks McCall.
5. Drove to Walmart to pick up supplies and track down dry ice.
6. Contacted Michael Oubre (Shaw Group), he will be bringing us dry ice tomorrow for packing our samples from this past cruise and sending them to LBNL via FedEx.
7. Checked C-Port Receiving for either of the (2) missing packages. No luck. It is possible that our missing packages were loaded onto the Brooks McCall by mistake. We'll have to make do with the rest of our sterile forceps and use 500mL Nalgene bottles instead of 125mL HDPE bottles.
8. The Ocean Veritas installed a wet lab on the deck of the ship. We will not move into the wet lab due to this being our last cruise and our intricate set up in the current lab.
9. Tomorrow we will get our samples packed and over to FedEx for overnight delivery.
